Rights of person subject to subsidiary liability beyond scope of separate dispute

Keywords: Person subject to subsidiary liability; separate dispute; appeal against court ruling

On November 16, 2021 the Russian Federation Constitutional Court recognized the right of individuals, who face subsidiary liability in insolvency proceedings, to appeal court rulings on the inclusion of creditor's claims into the register of creditor's claims. The author maintains the Constitutional Court position should serve as a reference point in separate disputes dealing with rights and interests of individual subject to subsidiary liability.

Minimal standards of copyright protection and protection of related rights under international conventions on intellectual property protection

Keywords: Copyright; related rights; intellectual property rights; self-fulfilling norms; indirect unification; reciprocity (retaliation); Bern convention; TRIPS Agreement; EU Directives

The paper discusses the problem of international copyright protection. The author maintains it is impossible to devise a comprehensive international legal act to cover the major part of intellectual property across the globe. International regulation generally covers specific types of intellectual property. Such situation calls for the introduction of special rules in national and international acts, which seems to be implausible unless agreement is reached between countries applying monistic and dualistic models.
